

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO
FACULTY OF ARTS & SCIENCE

In honour of the outstanding work of the late Professor Robert L. Jefferies, the Department of Ecology and Evolutionary Biology has created an endowed scholarship to be awarded annually to a student in graduate research in Arctic ecology, global change or field experimentation.

Robert L. Jefferies graduated from the University of Bristol, 1958 and Ph.D. plant ecology, in 1962, followed by a fellowship, University of California, Davis. He taught at the University of East Anglia before joining the University of Toronto in 1975. Bob promptly began his renowned study of goose-plant dynamics of the salt marshes along Hudson Bay. Based on this key work Bob became a Canadian representative on the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change: the Panel shared the Nobel Peace Prize 2007. Professor Jefferies found great pleasure in teaching the huge first-year biology class, which he performed from arrival through retirement. Similarly Bob's 100+ research publications continued uninterrupted by retirement. Family and colleagues of Bob Jefferies invite friends, colleagues and students of Bob's to contribute to this award in his honour.
